Biographical Note/Historical Note/Administrative History

Indiana University was founded in 1820 as a liberal arts institution. What are now departments of the College of Arts and Sciences served then as the core of the university from which all other schools developed.

Scope and Contents

This collection includes forms, notices, memos, and reports relating to non-academic staff and faculty of Indiana University from 1941-1949. Materials relating to non-academic staff are about training, wages, vacations, retirement, and personnel policy. The faculty materials pertain to teaching, exams, grading, course changes, committees, and out-of-class requirements. There is a brochure entitled "Definitions for Today: Nazism, Fascism, Communism, Democracy" by Professor Heber P. Walker, head of the department of history in Evansville College, published in 1941.

Arrangement
